GENERAL DESCRIPTION

Pécs has a 2000 years old history. During this term the city was known as a respector of culture, education and arts as well. In 1367 King Louis the Great founded the first university in Hungary. The predecessor of our library was the first public library in Hungary, was established by György Klimo bishop of Pécs in 1774.

The Regional Library and Center for Learning (Dél- Dunántúli Regionális Könyvtár és Tudásközpont – DDRKTK) was one of the five key projects of the European Capital of Culture 2010 program in Pécs. The new institution integrated the three major libraries of the city: the City Library of Pécs, the Csorba Győző County Library and the Central Library of the University of Pécs; furthermore it also includes the Library of the Faculty of Law and Economics

The Centre for Learning has a total floor space of nearly 13 000 square metres. The building hosts community, cultural and leisure programmes and temporary exhibitions as well.

The complete holdings of the University of Pécs consists of more than 1 million volumes. The Collection provides information and documents for its registered readers.

On the ground floor can be found the cloak-room, bookstore, café, restaurant and the Central Office of Student Services (Their goal is to support the achievements of youth in the most productive ways, as well as to grant them equal opportunities and to improve the quality of their lives.)

The first floor houses Hungarian and foreign literature, fiction books, books on literature theory, linguistics, foreign languages and grammar.

The Scientific Collection is located on the second floor. There is the Great Reading Hall what provides an opportunity for quiet reading and research.

On the third floor can be found special themes of academic topics: not only law, governance and administration, but also economics, business studies and statistics too.

The fourth floor is dedicated for children and music: the two collections complete the Knowledge Centre into a whole that serves every readers.

The Library of the University of Pécs is a network library consists of 15 various faculty, institution and departmental libraries. They have a unified computer catalog system, web-site and regulation.

The library is open every day from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and can be visited only with valid library card. Registration is free for the students of the University of Pécs. Documents required for registration: identity card/ driving-licence/ passport and student ID. Registered members can borrow up to ten documents for one month at a time. The loan period can be renewed twice for a month.
